The improvement in the lobby will be marked. In the first be located a large column directly in the center of the lobby. It will be of white marble and contain an electroller, with one hundred incandescent lights. Another similar column will be placed further along and about opposite the center of the stairway. The present wooden stairway will be torn out altogether and a new one of white marble, with ornamental iron balustrade, placed in position. This stairway will match in material the two columns already referred to. The large mirror which has for so many years stood at the entrance into the theater proper will be taken out and ten swinging doors, the upper portion of art glass, will form an uninterrupted entrance to the lower floor forty feet in width. The mirror will be utilized in a handsome large toilet room, which is to be a feature of the improvements at the the-

the upper floors, but it is in the lobby and on the main floor that most of the work will be done. New chairs will be placed throughout the lower floor, with the exception of the three rows known as the orchestra circle, which will probably be left as they are, being comparatively new and very roomy and comfortable. A new stage has just been put in the theater. The proportions of the new theater will be fine, its acoustics perfect, and there is no better location for cation for a theater anywhere. The stage is unusually large, and the improvements to be made will bring the house, throughout, up to date. In enlarging the lobby the area-way, which is at present waste space, will all be utilized.

FINDING MORE CLEWS

THE MYSTERIOUS TRIO.

Albert Lintner, charged with the murder of Leo Hirth, will be given a preliminary hearing in Police Court this morning. Superintendent Colbert is confident that the prisoner will be held for grand jury action, and does not anticipate that the line upon which his attorney will undertake his defense will be disclosed to-day. It is hardly probable that either side will introduce much evidence in Police Court, but, for fear that an attempt to have the prisoner liberated at this time might be made, all the detectives and police officers who have any knowledge of the facts leading to Lintner's arrest will be in court, ready to testify if called upon. Mrs. Bridget Hirth, widow of the murdered man, has been summoned to attend, but it is not known that she can be present, owing to her serious condition. Not only does the superintendent believe that Lintner will be held for grand jury action, but he also has but little doubt that an indictment will be returned against the man.

The police and detectives say it is unwise to reveal any of the information that would give the defense an inkling of what evidence it would have to rebut when the case comes to trial. It is only by persistent effort that anything can be learned, as all persons who give clews to the police department are warned not to talk. As told in the Journal yesterday morning, a witness has been found in the person of conductor Opaque Shades, 3 ft. by 7 ft., mounted J. F. Poe. of Elder avenue, who may be able to throw considerable light on the movements of Al Lintner on the night of the murder. Poe did not call at the police station yesterday for the purpose of identifying Lintner as one of the men who rode on his car and alighted near Hirth's saloon late on the night of the murder. He has what is known as a "swing run" on the Mount Jackson car line, and it is difficult for him to get away long enough to come to headquarters. At 10 o'clock last night the superintendent said that Poe had not called to identify the prisoner.

The marshal of Haughville called on the superintendent yesterday afternoon and was sent to look at Lintner. The prisoner greeted him by name, and had evidently met him in Haughville. The marshal said that he could not identify Lintner as one Grilles and Fret Work go with of the trio of men he drove out of town on the night of the murder. Night-watchman Hall and Mr. Calvert, both of the malleable iron works, saw the men and were present when they were ordered to leave At midnight Hall saw the tallest of the men returning through Haughville, and he was then walking in the direction of When the Drawing Teachers Come Hirth's place. The marshal was not positive that Lintner was not the man who returned through town and who was seen by Hall. Hall and Calvert will be asked to see Lintner, for the purpose of determining whether he was one of the men sent away

> Willis J. Woodward, proprietor of two saloons, one on South Delaware street and the other near the street-car stables, had an adventure with three suspicious-looking characters at the latter place shortly after midnight on the night of the murder. Mr. Woodward has a restaurant and hotel in connection with the West Washington-street saloon for the accommodation of street-car employes. He was in his restaurant alone on the night of the murder, when three men, one of them considerably taller than the others, came into his place about midnight and asked for a drink. Mr. Woodward said yesterday that he arose, faced the men, and informed them that they could have nothing to drink at that hour of the night. The smallest of the trio closed the door behind him when he entered and stood with his back against it. After being refused the drinks the men held a whispered consultation and left the place. The next morning Woodward read of the murder, and remembered at once the occurrence of the night before, and immediately communicated with the police. He said that two of them corresponded to the description given by Mrs. Hirth of the burders who killed her husband. When Al Linther was arrested, Mr. Woodward was confident that he was one of his midnight visitors, but upon seeing him at the station house last Sunday declared that he had never seen Lintner before. The men described by Woodward fill the description of the fellows seen by conductor Poe in the shadows of the church on Miley avenue—just a few rods from the saloon—and of the shadows of the church on Miley avenue—just a few rods from the saloon—and of the shadows of the church on Miley avenue—just a few rods from the saloon—and of the shadows of the church on Miley avenue—just a few rods from the saloon—and of the shadows of the church on Sait it is not known how many other people have been asked to identify Lintner. Neither can it be learned whether he has been identified by anyone beside Mrs. Hirth.

It was conductor Poe who saw the three men in the shadows of the church a half hour before the murder. Information first received indicated that they had been seen by another conductor, but it is now said that when conductor Poe saw the men near the church he recognized two of them as the passengers he had hauled earlier in the evening, and who alighted from the car at that

Superintendent Colbert and Chief Splan both seem to feel that they have sufficient that nothing has been left undone, and that every rumor has been traced down to its origin. "We hear a new story every day," said detective Splan last night, "and while some of them seem unreasonable, everything gated, even stories that we know to be mere hearsay. You have no idea of the lifficulty we have encountered in this case people we talk to declare that they nothing, and that all they know was told them by other parties. Traced to their source, some of the stories prove to have sundation on mere surmises. Still, we act upon the theory that there is some truth back of every statement that is made until we are satisfied there is no foundation for the story told us."

TO SHUT DOWN MAY

THE BITUMINOUS COAL OPERATORS OFFER THEIR ULTIMATUM.

Miners Must Accept 55 Cents a Ton-The Meeting in This City

Yesterday.

The Indiana bituminous coal operators had a special meeting at the Denison House yesterday to hear the report of the committee appointed at the Terre Haute meeting to confer with the miners as to prices for the next year. The operators knew beforehand that a period. the committee had been unable to reach a satisfactory agreement with the miners, and the object of the meeting, in fact, was to discuss the probable situation after May 1, the date on which the scale for a new year goes into 'effect. The operators' committee proposed to pay the miners 55 cents a ton for all coal which is shipped in competition with the eastern Illinois coal, and 61 manded 66 cents, but finally came down to 61 cents, the price paid to the Ohio miners. The operators could not agree to this 61-cent scale, and after president J. Smith Talley called the meeting to order yesterday the following resolution, offered by A. L. Ogle and seconded by P. D. Whitehead, was

"Resolved, That we approve of the action of our scale committee and request them to continue as our representatives in making a settlement with the miners. We instruct them to insist upon such a price for mining as will place the operators of the State of Indiana on an equality with the operators of the State of Illinois in marketing their coal. Pending a further report of the scale committee no operator shall pay for mining more than 55 cents per ton after May 1, 1896."

The following companies were represented The Summit Coal Company, F. M. Dugger, New Currysville Coal Company, I. H. Wolley; Linton Mining Company, F. Strong; Grand Coal Company, J. L. Devonald; Coal Bluff Mining Company, J. Smith Talley; Park County Coal Company, Joseph Martin; Island Coal Company, A. M. Ogle; Calumet Coal Company, P. D. Whitehead; Erhman Coal Company, C. H. Erhman; Jackson Hill Coal Company, J. C. Kolsum; Shelburn Coal Company; Brazil Coal Company, J. H. Mc-Clelland; New Pittsburg Coal Company, the Hader & Hafer Coal Company, the Vigo Coal Company, the Dugger Co-operative Coal Company, and the Watson & Little Coal Company. ley; Linton Mining Company, F. Strong

The Indiana bituminous mines will close said yesterday, a comfrom the operators the latch string out." Talley stated that the Indiana operators would not be unwilling to have the price as high as 61 cents, or even higher, if the prices paid in other States was kept up to that standard. He said the Indiana operators cannot pay Indiana miners more money than the miners in other States receive and yet compete with the coal dug in other States.

yet compete with the coal dug in other States.

"In the Grape Creek district in Illinois," said he, "the highest price paid for digging bituminous coal is 52 cents, and nearly all of this coal is shipped into Chicago. Many of our mines are only a few miles away, just across the Indiana line, and we use the same railroad in shipping our coal into Chicago. While this competition is very sharp, we are willing to pay our miners three cents above the Grape Creek price. We couldn't possibly afford to pay 61 cents. Yet on all our coal, which we ship in competition with Ohio, we are willing to pay the Ohio price. You see it is difficult to establish a basis for prices, yet this sort of a plan is carried out in Pennsylvania. The Indiana miners hope to boost the Illinois prices by going out. The operators argue that it would be better for the miners to let the Indiana operators get some of the Chicago trade, for with big business in Indiana, prices for digging would be sure to go up. The Indiana bituminous coal mining industry has made but little progress in the last ten years, while in Illinois it has almost quadrupled. I saw the statement made recently that Illinois now ranks next Goods, Cut Glass and Fine Pottery, to Pennsylvania. Even if the Indiana mir ers do not accept the operators' price of 55 cents, there will be no cessation in digging in the Clinton district, of Vermillioln county, for an agreement has been made by which these miners are to continue at work at 55

The scale in Indiana last year was 60 cents, while Ohio was paying 51 cents. This, the Indiana operators claim, left but very little coal being dug in Indiana, compared to the output in other States. Mr. Talley says that the Indiana coal miners are an intelligent set of men, and he thinks they will recognize the inability of the operators to pay more than 55 cents when a 52-cent price is prevailing only a few miles away. Ohio coal has been gradually encroaching on the territory supplied by Indiana operators. The location of the bituminous mines of Indiana makes it costly to ship much of the coal east.

Mr. Talley thinks there are between 3,000 and 4,000 bituminous miners in this State. If they conclude to go out on May 1 it will mean the shut down of the mines for quite a period.
